

Ironbark makes the Q400 list 4 years in a row

Ironbark Software had made the Q400 list for the fourth time in a row.

Described by ex-Premier Peter Beatty as "unquestionably one of the key business events of the year," the Q400 is a program that provides public recognition of the achievements of Queensland's local business heroes – the owners of the state's leading home-grown enterprises.

Now entering its fifth year, it comprises: a prestigious listing of the state's top 400 privately owned companies; the official publication featuring the final list and profiles of member companies; and the annual Q400 Business Summit, which each year attracts over 300 of the state's leading business operators to hear an unrivalled line-up of speakers on issues of direct relevance to private company owners and managers, as well as a unique forum to network and socialise with their peers.

"The Q400 has provided us with the opportunity to be featured in one of Queensland's key business events of the year. It is of great significance to be included and recognized as a leading, privately owned company in Queensland..."

Chris Findlater – Managing Director, Ironbark Software.
